Announcement

Carpet Dept.

There is not a Derby manufacturer in the country that doesn't know that he can use as good fur as needs to be put into a Derby; use the best labor and the best trimmings, and sell that Derby, with a profit, at $3.

But so long as people will pay $5, naturally comparatively few will sell at $3.

We do; and the Derby bears our name and our guarantee.

All the recognized Spring shapes and colors.

All the good kinds of Spring overcoats and suits.

YONKERS

This evening at Music Hall Mozig Rosenthal will give a piano recital under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. There has been a large advance sale of tickets, which assures the success of the undertaking. The members of the Wesleyan Glee Club, who gave the free entertainment on Saturday evening, in McCann's Hall, spent yesterday as guests in number of Yonkers homes.

The home-coming of Company B of the 20th Regiment to-day is being eagerly looked forward to by the friends and relatives of the company. This company is composed almost entirely of Yonkers men, and is commanded by Captain John L. Fruen, for many years in command of the 4th Separate Company, N. Y. G. N. While the company's general return to the scene of the conflict at the Greenville, S. C., there is no doubt in the minds of the people that if they had gone into action they would have acquitted themselves admirably.

The reception will be held in the evening, and it is expected that it will be largely attended. The Yonkers Choral Society invites all to a discussion on "Handel and the Messiah" by Frederick J. Burnell, conductor of the Choral Society, in the First Reformed Church on Friday evening of this week. No charge for admission will be made.

PEEKSKILL

The Oakside Alumni Association announces that the next lecture of its course will be delivered on Tuesday evening, April 3, by the Rev. Isaac Kip, formerly a pastor of the Reformed Church in this village. The subject will be "The Highlands of the Hudson and the Part That They Played in the War of the Revolution."

The report of the Helping Hand Association just issued shows that it ran behind financially last month. The receipts were $1,000 and the expenditures $1,050. Fifteen patients were admitted to the Helping Hand Hospital, fifteen were discharged and fifteen were left under treatment.

PORT CHESTER

There is a suspicion that incendiaries are at work in this village. The fires seem to be confined to the business section. Last week the store of M. Stamboni was partially burned at an early hour in the morning. After the firemen had put their apparatus away, the fire broke out again. Early on Saturday morning Mrs. Henry Seigel, a neighbor, noticed flames bursting from the rear of her house. She called Raphael, engineer, at Adair's. She told him what had happened, and three times to call the Fire Department. The fire was put out by the chemical engine company, after the contents of the shop had been destroyed. Port Chester has no fire force, making it difficult to apprehend the offenders.

NEW-ROCHELLE

The Aldermen have given notice of a public hearing on Monday, April 3, at 8 o'clock p. m., on the application of the Westchester Gas and Coke Company for a franchise to lay mains in the streets for the purpose of supplying gas to the residents. The company offers to furnish gas at $2.50 a thousand feet, which is cheaper than the present rates. If the franchise is granted, it will be subject to an annual tax of $500. Fifteen patients were admitted to the Helping Hand Hospital, fifteen were discharged and fifteen were left under treatment.

THE GOVERNOR GOES BACK.

NO DECISION ABOUT LEGISLATIVE MATTER REACHED ON HIS VISIT HERE.

Governor Roosevelt went back to Albany yesterday. In the course of his brief visit to the city he testified before the Commission appointed to investigate the beef furnished the Army in the late war, reviewed the military tournaments at Madison Square Garden, met and talked with various Republicans of importance and did many other things as well. The Governor's talk with Senator Platt and Mr. Odell was productive of no decision about the matters under consideration, and, in fact, was merely preliminary to the visit Senator Platt is to pay the Governor in Albany this week.

At the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday there was much talk about the Amsterdam-ave. bill. Edward Lauterbach flitted in and out all day, and had several talks with Senator Platt, Senator Raines, Senator Higgins and others, including Mr. Boardman, of Tracy, Boardman & Platt, were also on hand. So far as could be learned, nothing was decided about the Amsterdam-ave. bill. One who was in a position to know said that Senator Platt and his friends were trying to find some solution of the question that, while it did not provide for four tracks in Amsterdam-ave., would do justice to Mr. Lauterbach and his friends of the Third-ave. line. None of those who took part in the conference seemed to know what would be done, neither could they in a general way define what "justice" to Mr. Lauterbach would be. Senator Ford and Assemblyman Fullerton were both in the city, and they were confident that the present bill, as amended, would go through. Mr. Lauterbach looked gloomy, but had nothing to say.

The talk of another bill providing for a charter for the Astoria Gas Company was general, but no one seemed to know just when this bill would be drafted, what provisions it would contain, or when it would be introduced. It was learned that those who are interested in the Astoria gas bill, while their bill was defeated in the Legislature, are still hopeful and intend to open the question again by the introduction of another bill, if this can be done. It is hoped by the friends of the Astoria bill that Senator Platt may be able to secure its passage while he is in Albany.

A BRIGHT SUNDAY AFTER ALL.

Thousands of young women peeped anxiously at the sky from their chamber windows yesterday morning. It was Palm Sunday, and they wanted fine weather to go to church in. Fine Sundays have been the exception, rather than the rule, lately; but that did not prevent the girls from being sadly disappointed when they saw the sky cloudy and threatening and the sidewalk wet from the slight snowfall of the night before.

Thousands of other young persons, male and female, perhaps less religiously inclined, were also hoping to take to their wheels and spin along dry pavements in a bright sunshine. They, too, grumbled at the dreary morning outlook and feared the clouds would let down rain at any moment. But they didn't. They held up, hour after hour, until about noontime they scuttled away altogether, and the sun streamed down gloriously and impartially upon the church-goers and the amusement-seekers.

Straightway thousands of those good, pretty girls put on their bonnets and walked out and the houses of those pretty good wheelmen upon them, not with any disreputable intention, but only to get firmer grip on their bicycles, and sped away, north, south, east and west.

The air was keen, but bracing, and from the Battery to the Bronx the streets showed that the people highly appreciated the chance to spend a few hours of their day of rest in the open.

For the books—Combine your selections well, so that every one who opens your library door will be "mightily pleased therat," as Samuel Pepys said of his library, in the days when libraries were scarce.

These cases, doorless, that the books may be easily "getable" are from $8.50; or bookshelves, brass trimmed, from $5.00; cases to fit any space, some very narrow for wall-suspension limited in width. For "Books that you cherish," limited are imlogion finish cases, with glass doors, from $11.00. Others with one, two or three drawers below, for portfolios, prints and artist proofs.

In studious hours, these desk tables with room for tops for books and one drawer, from $12.00—less formal than desks. For the study-corner our bookcase and desk combinations are so complete; low or tall, simple or fanciful.

For seat comfort, these "dwarf-conches"—round, useful "seats for one"—upholstered with deep-colored velvets, and these sofas and easy chairs upholstered with tapestry in brave and strong colors; and these settles—padded and soft leather backs; oak seats to be piled with pillows, and broad arms for book rests.

Always the latest designs, when you

A HORRIBLE DISCOVERY OF THE CARPENTER OF THE UMBRIA.

W. A. Scott, a Liverpool corn broker, had come to believe that liquor could not kill him. He used to brag about it. He was half Scotch, half Irish, and that is a mixture which breeds endurance. He possessed burly frame and had travelled in many climes without harm, so that when on March 18 last he boarded the Cunard liner Umbria at Liverpool, on which he had engaged saloon passage for New-York, he was looking forward joyously to a six days' cruise.

Now came the devil that lurks in rum hats to be defied. He saw his chance when Scott ventured into the Atlantic. With科学技术 to add to his natural strength, he soon became a veritable giant as a carmine master. Scott ordered more drink. The steward burnt him, but Scott said rum was just medicine to his constitution. He picked himself up in his stateroom and lay down next morning, with a sumptuous meal of oysters and cheese. As he swallowed more rum, he grew wild, then violent, and heard sounds of things being rent asunder were heard coming from the door.

Now came the drink devil's time. He first caused Scott to smash a champagne bottle against a basin. Then he managed to have it held close on a big pile of sugar. The steward, who was once sick, did not feel well, so he seemed a positive evil awfully. When the steward came to open the stateroom door next morning, he found Scott lying on the floor, with his back against the door, his throat literally sawed open—muscles, arteries and windpipe shredded out as if some wild beast had devoured them.

The body was buried on the same day, Friday, March 27, in the Bell Cemetery, another passenger, reading the service. The Umbria reached New-York port yesterday.

He was said to be about fifty years old, spoke with a slight Irish accent, had some money, not much, in his possession; schedules of grain rates, etc., and knew the names of the officers who would not be disclosed, because they consider it proper to communicate with that person before doing so.
